St. Vinny's Recognized as Best Thrift Store

2014 St. Vincent de Paul Awards*Shop St. Vinny's and Help Dane County Neighbors in Need*

St. Vincent de Paul received two honors that affirm what we hope you already know: We operate the best thrift/resale stores in our community! Thanks to your votes, The Isthmus reader poll gave us the nod as "Madison's Favorite" in the thrift-shop category. Check us out in the "Annual Manual." In addition Wisconsin State Journal's "Answer Book" confirmed our status as "Star of Madison" in the resale-shop category. As judged by readers of the paper, madison.com, the Capital times and 77 Square.

When you donate and shop at St. Vinny's Thrift Stores, you're directly helping our Dane County neighbors in need. Last year our stores provided $416,530.00 worth of clothing, furniture and bedding directly to low-income individuals. Check out www.shopstvinny.com.

St. Vinny's to move into former car dealership

By Derek Spellman May 13, 2013 0

Stoughton's St. Vincent de Paul thrift store will be moving east this fall.

The Society of St. Vincent de Paul last week acquired the former Stoughton Motors used car dealership, 1509 U.S. Highway 51/138, with plans to relocate there in the coming months.

The Stoughton thrift store, one of six the Society's District Council of Madison operates in Dane County, has been at its current location at 111 W. Jefferson St. since it opened in 1991. The council is hoping the new, expanded location—about a mile away and on the city's busiest thoroughfare – will improve the store's visibility and sales.

"We're grateful to Stoughton," Ralph Middlecamp, executive director for the Society's District Council of Madison, said in a news release. "Our store here has continued to produce revenue to support our mission and has long offered direct charity to the local people in need who are assisted by our conference members from St. Ann Parish.

"Our off-the-beaten-path location, however, has led to relatively flat sales growth over several years. We expect our new location will change that this fall."

The current store was located in a former supermarket but behind both a shopping strip and parking lot. By contrast, the store's new home will put it alongside a road with a traffic count of almost 16,000 vehicles per day.

The Stoughton Motors dealership, which is part of Stark Automotive, has been closed since last year, when Stark moved those vehicles to its dealership at 1423 U.S. Highway 51.

The society will continue to operate at its current location in Stoughton for the next four to five months

The Stoughton Motors dealership, which is part of Stark Automotive, has been closed since last year, when Stark moved those vehicles to its dealership at 1423 U.S. Highway 51.

The society will continue to operate at its current location in Stoughton for the next four to five months while the dealership is being remodeled and its showroom and service bays converted into retail floor space for clothing, furniture and other donated gently used goods, the society said.

Once that work is complete, the Stoughton store will move from an 8,250-square-foot building with 5,650 square feet of floor space to a building with more than 18,000 square feet, about 15,500 of which will be sales floor space. The Stoughton store also will go from the smallest of the six Dane County locations to among the largest, and the society plans to add Sunday hours once it opens at its new location.

The Stoughton move will also be the second time in the last couple years that the society has moved one of its thrift stores into a former car dealership. In September 2011, the Verona thrift store moved into the former John Erickson Chevrolet building at 513 W. Verona Ave.

"Our experience in taking an auto sales and repair space and turning it into a large and successful thrift store helps gives us the confidence that we can do it well again," Middlecamp said in the news release.

The Society of St. Vincent de Paul's stores, popularly known as "St. Vinny's," sells donated materials such as clothes, shoes, small appliances, books and furniture. The society in turn uses the proceeds from those sales to help local people in need.

St. Vincent de Paul's Dane County stores not only sell gently used items to the general public but also provide materials such as clothing, bedding and housewares to needy families free of charge through a voucher system.

Last year, through its stores and through a central service center and food pantry, St. Vincent de Paul provided Dane County needy families with direct aid valued at more than $2.28 million, the society said in the release.

The public can still drop off materials for donation to the Stoughton St. Vinny's at its current location. An announcement will be made later about when the new location will begin accepting donations.

Some places become so common in communities, everyone expects a city to have one.

They even have a nickname.

When people talk about St. Vinny's, they're referring to the Society of St. Vincent de Paul and its resale and donation sites in Baraboo, Mauston, Portage, Reedsburg, Prairie du Sac and Wisconsin Dells.

The society's resale stores offer an almost infinite array of gently used – and sometimes new – clothing, furniture, household items and knick-knacks, from vintage lunch boxes and typewriters to pup tents and lawn maintenance household items and knick-knacks, from vintage lunch boxes and typewriters to pup tents and lawn maintenance equipment.

The stores receive and sort an array of donated items, some of which cannot be resold because of condition or other issues.

Some donated items never make it to the resale floor or local recycling bins, and those items — as well as every cent of profit each local Society of St. Vincent generates from its resale efforts — have a higher purpose. One that bespeaks the sole reason all these stores exist.

That purpose, as first established in the early 17th century in France by a law-student turned pastor is straightforward and likely never to change: To serve those in need.

Giving help

Whether the St. Vinny's in question is the century-old Baraboo conference of St. Vincent de Paul or the five-year-old Mauston conference formed almost exactly 100 years later — that single, simple function is unchanging.

"We serve and help the poor," said Chris Fearing, executive director of the Wisconsin Dells Society of St. Vincent de Paul, which earlier this year marked its 30th anniversary.

Each of the region's St. Vincent conferences operates autonomously and is sustained largely from profits derived from their resale stores. They also accept and receive financial donations, but unlike many non-profit organizations with national and world-wide reach, each local St. Vincent de Paul Society conference is 100 percent self-sustaining and self-governing.

The five St. Vincent conferences all trace their lineage back to Baraboo and the humblest of beginnings — a rectory closet inside St. Joseph Catholic Church.

The beginning

When Pastor Edward C. O'Reilly arrived in town as the third pastor of St. Joseph Catholic Church in 1911, "one of this first tasks was to form a society to help the poor," according to a regional history of the St. Vincent Society written by Mike Grogan, long-time manager for the Baraboo store at 100 South Blvd.

With the rectory closet serving as the region's first St. Vinny site, support from such local citizens as Carl Hoffman and M.J. Coughlin and fundraising by area organizations like the Knights of Columbus, the Holy Name Society and the Baraboo Eagles, the Baraboo St. Vincent Society became a reliable source for assistance to those in need.

"At times, the treasury has been low but, by the Grace of God, the society has never been broke," O'Reilly once declared, according to Grogan's written history. "It never was forced to turn down a request in urgent need."

The Baraboo conference eventually grew to offer assistance to those in need across the entire region, its reach stretching as far north as Mauston and Montello, west to Reedsburg and Richland Center, south to Mazomanie and Spring Green and east to Pardeeville and Rio.

The Baraboo St. Vincent eventually spawned several other local, autonomous conferences — a process known as "twinning" — and all of the region's five societies can trace their roots directly or indirectly back to Baraboo.

Stores expand

The Portage St. Vincent Society opened a retail store in 1973, Wisconsin Dells opened its first store in 1989 and Sauk City opened in 1994. The Mauston conference was twinned by the Dells conference in 2011. The current Reedsburg branch of St. Vincent is a twin in progress and still under the management and oversight by the Baraboo conference, with a goal of autonomy and self-sufficiency in the future.

Each St. Vincent conference determines how best to serve local needs, with profits from the stores and any financial donations going back to their respective communities. This means each St. Vincent Society's assistance possibilities are unique to its location.

Unique variances

This explains why the Sauk Prairie St. Vincent Society provides medical and dental care and addiction assistance at a building just behind its resale store in Prairie du Sac.

The Portage St. Vincent operates a food shelf, and the Wisconsin Dells St. Vincent founded and manages transitional housing at the Stepping Stone apartment complex on Vine Street.

Resale offerings at St. Vincent sites across the region also vary widely, as does each society's approach to resale.

In addition to its traditional resale site on Highway 16, the Dells St. Vincent operates an upscale retail boutique on Superior Street downtown.

The Sauk Prairie resale store includes antique and vintage goods sections as well as a new line of artisan-made repurposed furniture items.

All St. Vincent locations provide clothing and financial assistance for expenses from those who have lost a job, need help on a mortgage or other hardships.

"The uncertainties in life 30 years ago" gave Chris Kleifgen-Fearing a perspective that led her to the life of a "Vincentian," the term used to describe those who have committed themselves to the ways of St. Vincent de Paul, the patron saint of all charities.

A way of life

Kleifgen-Fearing serves as executive director for the Dells St. Vincent de Paul Society, and her life experience three decades ago resulted in what she believes was a “call” to serve.

“Being a Vincentian is not something I do, it’s something I am,” Kleifgen-Fearing said. “I may need the help someday, but until then I’m able to give help.”

In true Vincentian fashion, Kleifgen-Fearing walks the talk on a regular basis, with a recent rainy morning in the downtown Dells providing a vivid example.

Just before lunchtime, she sets out from her office in the basement of St. Cecilia Catholic Church near downtown, driving to nearby Spring Hill School to pick up a supply of hot lunches prepared by the food services staff there as part of the Dells-Delton area’s summertime free lunch program.

The next stop is the site of Stepping Stone apartment complex on Vine Street, where Kleifgen-Fearing braved a driving rainstorm to deliver those lunches to the children who live there.

The Vincentian commitment to service apparently is contagious, whether one’s “calling” comes early in life or professional circumstances simply lead to a position managing the store.

Baraboo and Reedsburg store manager Mike Grogan and Sauk Prairie St. Vincent assistant manager Jarrod Vande Hey both fall into the former category, having begun as volunteers on the way to long-term, permanent employment.

Mauston St. Vincent Store Manager Stacy Hartje, Portage St. Vincent General Manager Tricia Pionke and Reedsburg assistant manager Mike Sauey all joined their local Vincentian effort after careers in retail or food and beverage.

All of them leave no doubt as to the deeply meaningful effect their professional association with the Society of St. Vince de Paul has had on their respective lives.

Paul has had on their respective lives.

"It's by far the most rewarding thing I've ever done," Pionke said.

"I love my job every day," Sauey said.

Dedicated full- and part-time employees are crucial to the region's Vincentian effort, as are countless volunteers across the regions who pitched in to help from the very beginning.

The National Council of the U.S. for the Society of St. Vincent de Paul estimates a national volunteer-to-staff ratio of 16 to 1 and the region's St. Vincent de Paul Societies always can use more volunteer help.

"Our task hasn't diminished," Kleifgen-Fearing said. "It's increased in today's society."
